

As a privacy advocate heavily involved in TCPA litigation, I believe the refinement of the TCPA by requiring "written consent or permission" prior to the transmission of unsolicited facsimiles, will remove any ambiguity in the law, often raised by defendants.

This is a plus for consumer privacy protection and I applaud those responsible for making this section of the TCPA, clear and to the point.

Richard M. Zelma